Report for 2023-24 (First Term)

Introduction

Nitesh is a cute boy who is regular to school, but he has been taking holidays lately due to his illness. When he does attend, he arrives at school on time, dressed neatly and tidily in clean clothes. His best friend is Sansiddha. Sometimes, he struggles with cleaning himself after using the toilet, so he needs assistance in toilet training. Nitesh enjoys eating all the vegetables and always finishes his food.

Circle Time

During circle time, Nitesh sits nicely with open eyes and chants all the mantras loudly, possessing a strong and clear voice. He likes to sing all the songs with actions.

Languages

Hindi

In terms of language, particularly in Hindi, Nitesh enjoys listening to stories from picture books. He comprehends the full story and can answer questions related to it. However, when retelling the story, he tends to be brief, and his story lacks sequence. In the "Myself" topic, Nitesh created a book about himself, including drawings and paintings. He learned to introduce himself in full sentences and can provide 5 to 7 lines of information about himself. In the "Body Parts" topic, he learned the names of external body parts and their functions through drawings and paintings of his own body parts. In the "My Family" topic, he learned about the relationships within his family and can describe his family in 5 to 7 lines.

English

Nitesh is a happy and cheerful child. He always likes to sit near didis during circle time. He loves singing rhymes in the group with his friends with action. He is interested in listening to various stories by looking at the picture books and through puppets. He heard the story of 'the thirsty crow' with puppets. He enjoyed listening to it and made pictures of this after listening and then tried his best to narrate the story by himself. He can speak by saying one words in between so he needs to improve his understanding and speaking skills.

In the topic of my body, he learnt the names of the external body parts with the help of a body part chart. He is able to show the different parts of his body.

In the topic of 'Myself', he learnt how to tell his full name in full sentence, his age, his favourite colour and fruits and vegetables, and also spoke the name of his school and his group. He made a book of all these by making pictures of these. He could tell what he has drawn in the picture.

In the topic of 'my family', he learnt how to speak the full name of his parents, their occupation and how many members are there in his family. He listened to stories of it through handmade puppets and learnt a rhyme on my family. He enjoyed singing this rhyme with his friends. He also did the role play of his family.

Mathematics

Nitesh approaches math class with enthusiasm and enjoys working with materials like Rangometry and Judo cubes. He accepts tasks readily and is engaged in class activities. However, irregular attendance due to his illness has affected his learning. Currently, he can effectively work with numbers up to 10 and understands numbers beyond 10 but struggles as the numbers increase. He can count up to 100 without objects. But the reversing order of number process is not yet clear to him. He can represent numbers using bead strings but still has a confusion between 15 and 50, 13 and 30. However, he has difficulty responding to questions or relevantly contributing in a large group setting. Consistent effort is needed to improve his learning.

Skill work

He is particularly fond of paper folding in art class, often creating boats. He folds paper properly and excels in drawing and colouring. He patiently completes all his artwork, enjoying the process. His favourite colour is blue.

Celebrations

Nitesh enjoys participating in celebrations, particularly in drama.

During practice sessions, he performs well. On stage, his voice is loud and clear. Notable performances include performing a drama about body parts on July 5th, singing a song loudly and clearly. He
